

Market Review: Hopes for a vaccine and support from the Fed boosted stocks

It was another strong quarter for stocks as the market rally continued in July and August, with the large-cap S&P 500 Index reaching an all-time high before a pullback in September. The S&P 500 Index gained 8.9% in the third quarter and the Russell 2000 Index, which tracks stock performance of small companies, rose 4.9%. The Lipper Mid-Cap Growth Funds Index was up 9.0%. The yield on the U.S. 10-year Treasury was 0.7% at the end of the third quarter, down from 1.9% at the start of the year, but the same as at the end of the second quarter.

Obviously, the pandemic and the shutdown of the overall economy was a complete shock to the system. The real surprise was how quickly the market seemed to shrug off the unprecedented social and economic paralysis. With the Federal Reserve (“Fed”) promising to do whatever is needed to support the markets, many investors feel the Fed has provided a backstop for the markets. The Fed has said that it will keep interest rates low for a long time, and it has added significant liquidity (cash) into the economy and made unprecedented asset purchases to keep credit markets stable, while indirectly boosting the stock market.

The U.S. government was also aggressive in its response to the pandemic, quickly passing bills that offered trillions of dollars in relief to businesses and individual Americans. It is now still possible that another bill could be passed. Hopes that a COVID-19 vaccine will soon be available, allowing more businesses to reopen and consumers to spend more confidently, have also supported equities.

Because the Fed’s policies have pushed interest rates so low, investors continue to buy stocks as they believe there is no alternative. “Big tech” has been incredibly strong in terms of stock market performance, pushing the market so high that it became disconnected from the still grim economic reality. This has in turn boosted large-cap indices, which has led to more investor money flowing into those passive indices. The largest five stocks in the S&P 500 Index recently accounted for nearly 25% of the index. While we are hesitant to call this a bubble, we are always highly skeptical of exceedingly popular investment trends.

U.S. growth stocks, including technology, which benefited from the shift online caused by COVID-19 this year, came under pressure in early September as valuations had become extremely high.

“Stocks are seldom cheap and popular at the same time.”

Portfolio Review

The Fund rose 4.14% in the third quarter, while the Lipper Mid-Cap Growth Funds Index gained 9.00%, and the S&P 500 Index increased 8.93%.

Large-cap stocks significantly outperformed smaller stocks in the third quarter, and growth stocks outperformed value stocks, which hurt the fund's relative performance versus the benchmarks. Our large cash position, which we held given the volatility in the market, worked against us as stocks posted such strong returns.

Caesars Entertainment, Inc., (formerly Eldorado Resorts, Inc.), Pool Corp., and Progressive Corp. all had an outstanding quarter and were the top contributors to the Fund's performance. Detractors from performance included Ligand Pharmaceuticals, Inc., eHealth, Inc., and First Hawaiian, Inc.

In September, we initiated a position in Open Lending Corp. Open Lending helps automotive lenders offer loans to traditionally underserved borrowers with near-prime credit ratings. Open Lending's primary offering pairs loan default insurance with its proprietary analytics to allow the lenders to give these car buyers more attractive rates. The company itself is not a lender, and does not provide the insurance coverage, but serves as an intermediary. We expect revenues to grow in excess of 40% per year for the next several years as Open Lending continues to partner with the car companies themselves to boost auto sales.

During the quarter, we added to our positions in eHealth, Inc. and Euronet Worldwide, Inc. on the pullback in those stocks. We also added to our Stryker Corp. holdings.

We trimmed our positions in Progressive after strong gains due to the run-up in the market. We sold our shares in 3D Systems.

3RD QUARTER TOP CONTRIBUTORS

Caesars Entertainment, Inc., (formerly Eldorado Resorts, Inc.)

Eldorado's acquisition of Caesars closed in July, and promptly rebranded as Caesars Entertainment. Caesars is now the largest casino-entertainment company in the U.S. and one of the world's most diversified casino-entertainment providers. It operates primarily under the Caesars, Harrah's, Horseshoe, and Eldorado brand names. Caesars' stock gained 46.6% in the third quarter, continuing the rally from the previous quarter. The management team has a proven history of quickly deleveraging after acquisitions and outperforming lofty cost reduction expectations. These tight controls on expenses as the casinos reopen are helping to make the company's regional casinos more profitable. The explosive growth in U.S. sports betting is also providing momentum.

Pool Corp.

One of our long-term holdings is Pool. It is the dominant distributor of products for swimming pools. During this period of social distancing, we have seen consumers spend heavily on their homes and other forms of recreation that do not necessarily involve significant social contact. We have anecdotally heard of pool builders who literally are not returning phone calls to hopeful homeowners. The stock gained 23.3% in the third quarter. We believe Pool will continue to enjoy not only this spike in swimming pool installations, but also the long-term maintenance spend (chemicals, replacement parts) for these new pools for years to come. We continue to like the growth profile and the competitive position that Pool enjoys.

Progressive Corp.

Progressive is one of the largest providers of car insurance in the United States. The company also insures motorcycles, boats, RVs and commercial vehicles, and is growing its home insurance business. The stock rose 18.3% in the third quarter. Progressive's profits more than doubled in July, aided by a decline in car accidents due to the stay-at-home restrictions put in place as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. We believe Progressive is well positioned for growth and offers solid long-term potential for revenue growth, strong earnings, recurring cash flow, and an attractive dividend payout.

3RD QUARTER TOP DETRACTORS

Ligand Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

Ligand Pharmaceuticals is a biopharmaceutical company focused on developing or acquiring technologies that help partner pharmaceutical companies discover and develop medicines. After a big rally in the second quarter, its stock declined 14.8% in the third quarter despite reporting strong quarterly revenue and earnings growth, and increasing its full-year outlook. The results were aided by Ligand's Captisol drug delivery technology that it is selling to Gilead Sciences for Remdesivir to treat COVID-19. The company has great products in the pipeline and partnerships in place, providing opportunities for future revenue generation that could lead to meaningful upside potential for the company and stock.

eHealth, Inc.

eHealth is a leading online health insurance platform that simplifies the process for consumers to compare and shop for Medicare Advantage plans. eHealth offers more than 10,000 plans from over 180 companies, including many of the nation's leading health insurance companies. The company has the opportunity to capitalize on the large number of Americans turning 65 every day and the growth in Medicare Advantage. After a very strong performance since we first bought the stock in October 2019, eHealth fell sharply in June and then further in July and August. The stock was down 19.6% in the third quarter. While the company reported strong operating results, investors were concerned that the “churn”, or number of clients canceling their plans, was higher than expected. While we trimmed our position earlier this year when the stock rose quickly, we added back to our position in August when we felt that shares became attractive again.

First Hawaiian, Inc.

First Hawaiian is a bank holding company headquartered in Honolulu. Its principal subsidiary, First Hawaiian Bank, is the largest banking franchise in Hawaii. The banking industry has been hard-hit by the heightened credit risk from COVID-19, compelling banks to ramp-up loan loss reserves. First Hawaiian has also been negatively affected by the pause in tourism during the pandemic. The stock fell 14.7% in the third quarter. We believe that strong military spending in Hawaii, tourism, and the geographically isolated loan portfolio provide an investment opportunity in First Hawaiian. It also has an experienced management team, strong business clientele, and is paying a very attractive dividend. It is also worth noting that First Hawaiian was included in the S&P 600 small-cap index as of July 24th.

Outlook and Strategy

We believe a sector rotation will likely occur as growth stocks have had a strong run despite the September correction and value stocks appear to offer better opportunities and valuations. The disparity is at an historically extreme level with growth stocks up 24% year-to-date, while value stocks were down 12%. We also believe smaller stocks should start to outperform larger stocks.

With the S&P 500 Index up more than 50% since the March lows and stocks pricing in an optimistic recovery in the economy and corporate profits, we believe the stock market volatility will continue. Investors will have to consider news about COVID-19 vaccines, the latest efforts to push through a new stimulus package, the unemployment rate, and the upcoming election in November. Add to that the recent news regarding President Trump’s COVID-19 diagnosis, and the only surprise would be no further surprises.

Our focus continues to be on individual companies. Given the prospects of more uncertainty, we will continue to run our selective, disciplined investment process. We invest in high quality small- and medium-sized companies with growing profits, reasonable valuations, and strong outlooks.

Thank you for your continued support and confidence in the Villere Funds.
